GIVE TEETH ATTENTION

Crooked, twisted, knarled and deformed teeth are a source of danger to the child, family and state as well. Buck Teeth Ben soon gets too sensitive to be in touch with his playmates, and he stays in the back-ground—getting further and further away from his fellows.

The child is in danger of being a recluse, a backward. Dentists are to be found all over the land. Call on them.

In every State, in almost every county you will find people, societies, calling the attention of mother to the necessities of dental cleanliness. Clean the teeth. You will find that a clean tooth never decays—you will find dark spots on the teeth under which lurk small germs that eat holes in the teeth. Get a little orris root and a good brush and rub your teeth. Get a brush for the boy and one for the girl. When you find the teeth and gums sore, bleed, the teeth falling into holes, the gums separate from the teeth, black spots on the teeth inside and outside of jaw, there is bacteria on the teeth; a little fluid organ will destroy the germs. If the teeth are in the last stages of decay, see a dentist.

Don't wait until you have lost your best teeth to look after your mouth. Watch the boy's and girl's mouth. Disease often comes from decayed teeth.

Told That There Was No Cure for Him

"After suffering for over twenty years with indigestion and having some of the best doctors here tell me there was no cure for me, I think it only right to tell you for the sake of other sufferers as well as your own satisfaction that a 25 cent bottle of Chamberlain's Tablets not only relieved me but cured me within two months although I am a man of 65 years," writes Jul. Grobein, Houston, Texas. Obtainable everywhere. (adv.)

Democratic Press Bureau

In the campaign of 1914 Colonel Roosevelt said: "The people can expect nothing from the Democratic party and worse than nothing from the Republican party." Now the Colonel is seeking to take the "worse than nothing party" into the Bull Moose wood shed, make it plead guilty to the charge, then parole it to the daddy Bull Moose upon the condition that it forsake its sins and make "my policies" the rule of its conduct. What a spectacle the G. O. P. will present whooping it up for the initiative, referendum and recall, the recall of judicial decisions and all the other isms of "my policies" it so vigorously denounced in 1912! Some dose, isn't it?

Roosevelt says Judge Hughes is a "whiskered Wilson." Of course that leaves the Colonel as the only available, "Simon pure, blown in the bottle; all others are spurious."

The influences that have been trying to bring about war between the United States and Mexico have recently re-doubled their efforts. Wild stories intended to arouse the people and create a sentiment in favor of "going in and cleaning up Mexico," have been printed in every daily paper yellow enough to print unauthenticated reports. William Randolph Hearst's newspapers are clamoring for intervention throughout all Mexico with fresh ardor. The Hearst's own immense ranch in Mexico. The people are not convinced that the situation justifies war with the Carranza government. President Wilson does not think so, and if Carranza retains his senses, as it seems likely he will, it isn't probable that this condition will change. None of the wild stories should be credited for a moment. Confirmation and proof should be awaited.

"The Democrats should win," is the title of an article by W. J. Bryan in which he makes a ringing appeal for the success of Wilson and the Democratic party. He frankly admits that he has differed from President Wilson on some questions, but emphatically endorses the administration in all its domestic and economic accomplishments and the most of its foreign policies. The article is a great disappointment to the Republican leaders and all others who have been hoping Bryan would either sulk or bolt following the nomination of Wilson by the 1916 convention.

St. Louis Republican officials sent a big bunch of silk stocking representatives to Jefferson city to ask the State Board of Equalization to double the assessment of farm lands in Missouri. They found the Board gave respectful attention to their long-winded harangues. Also found that the members of the board knew a few things about the assessment of property in St. Louis. The record shows that the assessment of farm lands in the most of the counties of the State has been increased by the local authorities from 30 to more than a 100 per cent since 1906, while the increase on St. Louis real estate since that year has been a fraction over 30 per cent.

A Republican victory in Missouri will mean a doubling of the taxes on people residing outside St. Louis. That is one of several reasons why there will not be Republican success in Missouri this year. Farmers and all voters residing in Missouri outside St. Louis who want their taxes doubled next year should vote the Republican ticket, sing praises to St. Louis Republican leaders from whom all blessings flow, look their wives and children in the face and tell them that their interests are secondary to the interests of our St. Louis god-fathers.

That "busted" treasury is still paying every warrant against Missouri the minute it is presented. Governor Major's order holding up all excess appropriations is still in effect and will prevent the accumulation of unpaid bills to be handed over to the next administration to pay. The Hadley administration left $476,000 of unpaid bills for the Major administration to pay. A Democratic administration is not so careless with the State finances.

The warden of the penitentiary has just completed the finest cell building in the United States. It has every modern convenience, is sanitary and roomy. The completion of the building has enabled the warden to inaugurate a reform he has contemplated since he took charge and became acquainted with prison conditions. That is, the separation of young men and first offenders from the professional criminals. This is now being done under the direction of the warden. This is the most important reform that has been instituted in the Missouri prison in the history of the institution. The yellow journals have criticised the warden when the facts did not justify them. Notwithstanding the false light in which they have attempted to place him, he has done more to make better conditions at the prison than any of his predecessors.

Splendid for Rheumatism.

"I think Chamberlain's Liniment is just splendid for rheumatism," writes Mrs. Dunburgh, Eldridge, N. Y. The quick relief from pain which Chamberlain's Liniment affords is alone worth many times the cost. Obtainable everywhere. (adv.)

Making War Munitions

Mr. W. J. Bryan recently addressed a large gathering of Des Moines people on the subject of "War and Peace." Among other things, he said that one of the reasons for war was the activity of selfish men who are interested in the manufacture of war materials, ammunition, battle ships, armor plate, etc. He illustrates it in this way:

Imagine a little lake with the land of three farms bordering on it. Some day a man goes to one of these farms and says:

"Has it ever occurred to you that you are likely to have trouble with your neighbors; and that if you do, you have no way of keeping them from coming across the lake and landing on your farm, and doing you a lot of damage? What you should do is to have a little battle ship anchored right out here by your land. If you have this you can defend yourself. Without it you are at the mercy of your neighbors."

So the farmer gets a little battleship, and ties it up to his wharf, where it will be ready to use in case anybody should attack him. Then this manufacturer goes to the second farmer and says:

"Do you see that little battleship over there? Do you know what that fellow is getting ready to do? Some of these days he will get in that battleship, and will come over here and attack you. If he should have a battleship, so that if he should come, you can defend yourself. You are in danger all the time until you get it."

The more the second farmer thinks this over, the more reasonable it seems to him. So he orders a battleship and does not feel safe until he has it tied up to his wharf. Then the manufacturer goes to the third farmer and says:

"I suppose you have not had any trouble with your neighbors, but it looks to me as if trouble might be coming for you. You notice over there that farmer A has a battleship, and I hear that Farmer B has just bought one. That looks suspicious. It looks as if they might be getting ready to make a raid on you. Don't you think you had better do something?"

And Farmer C lies awake that night thinking about it; and the more he thinks, the more uneasy he becomes; and so he gives the manufacturer an order for two battleships. Then the manufacturer starts back to farmer A and says:

"You see it is coming out just as I told you. Your one battleship is no longer sufficient. You will have to get ready to meet the combined attack of these other men." And so he goes around from one to the other, stirring up suspicion and trouble.

Mr. Bryan exercised all the arts of an orator to make his point. But there is some foundation for the belief that at least part of the trouble in the world has been due to selfish men whose interests will be promoted by war. Men who are interested in the manufacture of battleships and armor plate and guns and ammunition would be more than human if they did not view with at least some satisfaction the prospect of trouble which might greatly increase the demand for the things they are making.

Recently in the United States Senate, a bill was up which provides that the government shall make its own ammunition and armor plate. There are good arguments which can be advanced on both sides of this question. The strongest argument against it is that if the government went into this business on a large scale, the private manufacturers would be driven out; that this would be very unfortunate in case we should be driven into war, because it could not be expected that the government plants would be able to make enough war munitions; that it is therefore desirable that private plants be maintained at different points over the country, so that in case of emergency, we would be sure of sufficient war supplies.

Senator Cummins of Iowa presented the other side of the argument. He said that he would vote in favor of the United States making its own armor plate and munitions. We quote:

"I shall vote for it because it is my profoundest conviction that the manufacture of armor plate for battleships is a governmental function. It is not only an appropriate governmental function, but it ought to be exclusively a governmental function; and I shall vote for it, hoping that private enterprise will, in the course of time, be entirely eliminated from the business, not only in the United States, but in every other country in the world. I shall vote for the bill because it is my hope that some time profit may be taken out of war, so far as it is possible to take profit from human conflict. Some time we must make this change, and the transition will never be easy; it will never be without obstacles. And we can make it now, when the sentiment of the whole world is aroused by the horrors of war, better than we can make it at any other time."

The position taken by Senator Cummins will commend itself to patriotic people who abhor war, but who realize the imperative necessity of being prepared to defend their homes if the occasion should arise. It is not so much to prevent the makers of munitions of war from making a profit. It is to eliminate them as disturbers of the peace.

And if the government should go into the business of making war munitions on a large scale, the workmen should be the enlisted men of the army, paid regular workmen's wages when engaged in this sort of work.—Wallace's Farmer (Rep.).

LATEST PORTABLE TELEPHONE

Washington, April 10.—A portable telephone, made of aluminum and weighing 2 1/2 pounds, the invention of a Forest officer, R. V. Adams, of Missoula, Montana, will be part of the regular equipment of patrolmen on the National Forests and coming field season. This instrument is regarded as a great improvement over the set formerly used, which weighed ten pounds.

It is said that a field man equipped with this telephone, a few yards of light emergency wire and a short piece of heavy wire to make the ground connection can cut in anywhere along the more than 20,000 miles of Forest Service telephone lines and get in touch with the headquarters of a supervisor or district ranger. To talk, one end of the emergency wire is thrown over the telephone line, the two ends are connected to the portable instrument, and the instrument is connected to the ground wire. The end of which must be thrust into the damp earth or in water. Contact with the line wire is made possible by removal of the insulation from a few inches of the emergency wire.

The Adams instrument does not ring the bell of the receiving telephone, but instead causes a screaming sound from a small megaphone-shaped apparatus descriptively known as a "howler." This instrument is installed at the ranger station telephone and is said to give effective notice that some one is on the wire. If the field man needs to talk with someone elsewhere on the line, the ranger station instrument can be used to ring up the person wanted, when the conversation can be carried on.

Forest officers say that these portable phones are especially valuable in reporting fires and other emergencies with the least possible delay, and also in sending instructions to field men and keeping the district rangers informed as to the progress of work going on in the field, thus supplementing the regular telephone sets installed at lookout points, ranger stations, and at convenient intervals along Forest Service roads and trails.

MERCHANTS SHOULD NOT ADVERTISE ON FENCES

"A farmer has as much right to paint a sign that he has butter and eggs for sale on the front window of the best store in town as the merchant has to paint his signs all over the farmer's barns and front yard fences," was the statement of J. B. Powell, instructor in advertising at the University of Missouri at Columbia in a speech before the Commercial Club of Hannibal recently.

Mr. Powell said that merchants should cease the use of this primitive form of advertising for farmers are now reading newspapers. He told of several cases where ornamental concrete bridges on good roads have been practically ruined from the standpoint of beauty through the painting of signs by merchants in near-by towns. He said that this kind of advertising would never get any business from the farmers who put up the money to build the roads and bridges.

"You will not find any mail-order house signs on the sides of barns or on fences, but you may find the name of the mail-order house on the shipping tags that brought these articles to the farmer's home. Mail-order houses respect the farmer's intelligence by sending him an attractively printed book from which to order merchandise. No wonder they get the farmer's confidence and business," Mr. Powell declared.—J. B. Powell of State University.
